Happy 100th Anniversaries to Giurlanis and Molinellis!

Teresa's Place, c. 1887

Congratulations to the Giurlani Family, this year celebrating 100 years of operating Teresa's Place restaurant in Jackson! In 1921, Teresa Bassignani opened her restaurant on Jackson Gate Road, originally a boarding house for miners, after immigrating to California from Italy. Her son, Paul Giurlani, and now her grandchildren, Teresa (Ferrucci), Phil, Alicia (Miller), and Joe have carried on the tradition of family-style food -- making them one of only a handful of hundred-year-old, family-owned California restaurants.

Another local family with Italian roots is celebrating 100 years in business -- the Molinelli Family!

Paolo Giovanni Molinelli immigrated to San Francisco from Italy in the early 1900s and with some partners, in 1921 started the Scavengers Protective Association, a waste collection company in the City by the Bay. Paul Molinelli, Sr., now president of ACES Waste Services, worked in the family business, eventually buying his father's share of the company after his death in 1962.

In 1988, after a period of years operating a Santa Rosa disposal company, Paul bought 88 Disposal Service in Pine Grove, which later became ACES Waste Services with partners Joe Assereto, David and Rich Ianni, and Paul Molinelli, Jr. And the rest is history!

Ryan Erosa grew up in Amador County and worked for his dad's custom door company before joining ACES about 12 years ago. ACES offered to pay for his truck driving school, and now he drives a large residential waste truck, picking up trash in Sutter Creek and the Castle Oaks neighborhood in Lone.

"My day starts early. I get in my truck, turn on my radio, take care of my route, enjoy the wildlife and morning scenery, and I'm done by mid-afternoon. It's a laid-back job," Ryan says.

Ryan and his wife, Tiffany, live with their four children in Sutter Creek. They like to travel and try to get away to Hawaii a few times a year.
